Message to Louisiana Residents

We are grateful that you heeded the warnings and evacuated to safety before Hurricane Gustav made landfall. It is natural that you want to return home. For your safety, we ask for your patience.

Right now, across the coast, damage assessments are being made. Search and rescue crews are operating, widespread power outages exist, some roads are not passable and vital businesses are closed.

No matter where you are taking shelter right now, you can be confident that state, local and federal officials' top priority is ensuring your safe return.

Once a parish is declared safe, we will immediately begin an orderly process to help you get home as soon as possible.

If you utilized state-assisted transportation, you will be transported back home as soon as possible. In order for you to be returned, several key actions have to be finalized and are currently underway.

All state and local highways and roads must be cleared for coaches and local buses.

Local cities and/or parishes will have local transportation coordinated to return citizens from the state drop-off locations to your homes.

Local cities and/or parishes must announce the all clear for re-entry.

State assisted buses and drivers are ready and available to return citizens to their home cities when these actions are finalized.

UPDATES: Pets, Power and Levees

Many of you have questions about your pets. We can assure you they are comfortable and receiving good care.

There are 1,300 pets sheltered in Shreveport and 1,665 pets are sheltered in Alexandria. As soon as it is safe to return home, you and your pets will be reunited.

More than 1.4 million homes in Louisiana are reported to be without power. Crews are working around the clock to restore power, and that work will continue over the next few days.

As weather permits, levee engineers from the Office of Coastal Protection and Restoration began assessing levee conditions on Tuesday.

State and Orleans Levee District officials are in the process of delivering needed resources to the east bank of Plaquemines Parish to close a levee gap near the Caernavron Siphon near the towns of White Ditch and Scarsdale.

In South Lafourche, no breeches or levee overtopping were reported.

In Terrebonne Parish, some flooding was reported in the towns of Montegut, Chauvin, Cocodrie and Dulac.

The levee system that protects New Orleans, Jefferson, Plaquemines and St. Bernard Parishes fared well in the storm.
